Office of the Governor

Whereas, Oscar Micheaux, the fifth child of former slaves, was born in southern Illinois in 1884 and became the only black to purchase a relinquishment claim in Gregory County on the Rosebud Reservation; by the time he was 24, his claim was valued at $20,000; and,

Whereas, Oscar Micheaux worked his land and made his mark in the early days of South Dakota's statehood, and he recorded his experiences as a settler in his book, The Conquest, which he personally sold in South Dakota and Nebraska; using the profits from 2,500 copies, he established the Western Book and Supply Company, later called the Micheaux Book and Film Company, and this firm published his next two books, The Forged Note and The Homesteader; and,

Whereas, Micheaux turned his creative talents to film making and, in 1918, he directed The Homesteader, the first all-black, full-length American film directed by a black, putting Micheaux in history books; and,

Whereas, His film career took flight and Micheaux produced over 40 films; he also wrote four more books and, to this day, his works are lauded by critics and have a dedicated following; and,

Whereas, Citizens of Gregory County are sponsoring an Oscar Micheaux Film Festival August 11-15, 2004, to honor this early pioneer and great artist who taught by example, through his films and books, the lessons of hard work, overcoming obstacles, and eventually achieving success:
